We denounce the sham Reciprocity, which juggles with the people's desire for enlarged foreign markets and freer exchanges, by pretending to establish closer trade relations with a country whose ar-ticles of export are almost exclusively agricultural products.

The states with which we have Reciprocity relations are the Spanish Colonies of Cuba and Puerto Rico, The British West Indian Colonies, Brazil, Nicaragua, Guatemala, Salvador and Honduras, Santo Domingo, the German Empire and the Empire of Austria-Hungary.

By these reciprocal relations we agree molasses, coffee and hides those Nations can supply, and they agree to receive attorneys have been engaged to dethe products of our farms, mills and factories, either absolutely free of duty or at a rate lower than that at which they ports of loss of life and cattle from the terrible storm of Tuesday and Wednesday are being received. Along the Rock Island railroad between Colorado Springs and the Kansas line the storm was at its worst. Near Falcom, a Rock Island track-walker was frozen to death, while a short distance from Mattison three hundred sheep were found dead and their herder was discovered nearly frozen to death. Engineer Leiman was running a snow-plow near the Kansas line when a part of the plow broke and seriously injured him. Three hundred cattle froze to death between Colorado Springs and Limon. Resolsis, also eastern Colorado, an unknown laborer was found dead from exposure. In the city of Colorado Springs, Charles Beattle died from the effects of the storm. Near Boulder, in northern Colorado, J. V. Wolf, a miner, was frozen to death. It is expected that further losses of life will be reported when communication is restored throughout the state.

> The Demand for Life-Partners Not Pully Up to the Supply-Some of the Causes of the Stagnation.

It is estimated that there are three million young men of marriageable age in the United States who obstinately neglect to provide themselves with wives, and this implies the existence of at least an equal number of young women of marriageable age who are waiting for proposals that never come. The fact is important as indicating one of the social tendencies of the period. It cannot be doubted, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, that the popularity of matrimony has materially declined in recent years, and that a kind of general hesitancy seems to prevail respecting the negotiation of such alliances. There was a time when the young people of the country hastened to pair themselves with bird-like eagerness and delight as soon as they were out of school; and society not only encouraged them, but practically commanded them to take that course. They were considered superfluous and burdensome until they got married. The true work of life could not begin with them, they were taught, so long as they remained single; it was their duty to become yoked without unnecessary delay, and it was a disgrace to miss reasonable opportunities in that relation. But it is decidedly different at the present day. The practice of wedlock is no longer imperative, nor does discredit attend the unmated state, even when prolonged into the thirties. There is as much advice given against marriage as in favor of it by the wise and experienced of both sexes, and the result is a steady decrease in the proportion of actual weddings to possible ones. The causes which have produced this marked change are not sufficiently definite for satisfactory analysis. It is probably true that our extravagant style of living, as compared with that of former times, is one of the effective influences. The cost of supporting a wife and raising a family is much larger than it used to be, and this feature of the matter often gives pause on both sides. We have come to measure so many things by money that matrimony has not escaped the rule. The young people are disinclined to start in a humble way and gradually improve their situation; they want all that their parents have without waiting and striving for it. Many proposals are unquestionably delayed or rejected on this account. Then it is well known that the new avenues of employment open to women have made them more independent, and probably also more exacting as to the qualifications of husbands. It is not nearly so common as it once was for girls to marry simply in order to secure a home and a living; they are able now to earn good wages and to take their time about assuming the duties of wives and mothers. We may safely believe, moreover, that the progress of women in education and in social power has led them to look less favorably upon the connubial condition by subordinating their hearts to their heads, so to speak. And finally, it cannot but be that the abundance of criticism to which the marriage system has been subjected by writers of pronounced vigor and skill has served to weaken it in the popular estimation, and to disparage the quality of sacredness that is its highest claim to respect and honor.

There is no reason as yet, however, to lament the prevailing tendency as a national misfortune. The amount of marrying is still large enough for all ordinary purposes; and it may be that less rather than more of it would best promote the interests of society. Such unions should be formed with some other object than that of merely propagating the species. They involve the most serious obligations and responsibilities of human life, and if people are learning to be slow and careful about making contracts of so much importance it is hardly a sign of decay or a threat of calamity. Whenever any two persons care so much for each other that they cannot happily live apart, they will be wedded, in spite of all opposing influences; and perhaps those are the only circumstances under which a wedding ought ever to take place. It would not do to say with Hamlet that "we will have no more marriages," and that all who are now single "shall keep as they are;" but we are justified in thinking that the ratio of matrimonial happiness is likely to be increased according to the meas ure of marriages that are brought about by reflecting instead of emotional means. The system with which the critics find so much fault is not perfect, but it is much better than they represent it to be, or it would not have survived so long. With all their flaw-picking, they have not been able to devise an acceptable substitute for it; and until they are able to do so it will continue to stand as the most beneficent of those great agencies which regulate and control the affairs of civilization.

Mining in Bolivia and Mexico.

Several of the most important mining companies of the district of Colquechaca Bolivia, have just been consolidated. This district is one of the richest of the silver-producing regions in the state, and the purposes of the combination are to settle existing disputes, the mines being all placed under one manage-ment. This new company has a nominal capital of 12,600,000 Bolivian dollars and a complete plan for working the several mines, with connecting railways completely equipped and extensive peat deposits for the supply of fuel for many years. It is estimated that three of the mines alone have, with interrupted work, produced 40,000,000 Bolivian dollars' worth in the last ten years, and the other mines are still in virgin ground. The semi-official statistics of Mexico show that since 1821 the republic has produced 100,000 tons of silver and 300 tons of gold, representing a money value of $4,320,300,000.
